

Mark Krause has been an entrepreneur all his life. It's in his blood. Starting in college where he went to Colorado State, he started his first business called Colorado Carpet Care.

Mark's passion for travel and chasing the waves inspired him to move to Maui right after college and become a semi-professional windsurfer while also making a living trading in the stock market. Mark lived in Maui for three years until getting Island fever and the acting bug and moved back to Los Angeles to start a small production company called Shoot-Out Films.

While in Los Angeles, Mark met the GM of the Argyle Hotel and nightclub, Michael Eisenburg. The two of them partnered together and traveled to Montreal to build a supper club called Illume. Illume was designed and conceived by Mark and was run by Michael.

Mark currently lives and plays in Colorado. His vision is to offer hands-free video recording devices for sports enthusiasts of all kinds. His passion for windsurfing, kite-surfing, surfing, snowboarding, mountain climbing and fishing has driven him to develop easy to use, burden-free devices that will allow everyone to effortlessly capture life's adventures.
